MCA Report

I received more information from our Board of Director's. In the January meeting, a stipend of $250 dollars was approved to help National Directors attend MCA's National shows. After consulting with an accountant and attorney it has been determined there would be major tax ramifications involving both the club and those Directors that receive the stipend. The $250 dollar stipend has been rescinded and further research will be conducted.

Applications have been received and approved for a National Show for the following clubs:

- March 24-26, 2017, Gulf Coast Regional Mustang Club in Pensacola, Florida
- August 24-27, 2017, Mustang Club of Greater Kansas City, Overland Park, Kansas
- August 31-September 2, 2018, Mustang Car Club of New England, Merrimac, New Hampshire. Because of the 2018 August/September date my guess is this will probably be a Grand National show.

Our 31st fall show on 19 September is now published in the event calendar of the June issue of Mustang Times magazine & the events section of MCA's website. It has also been posted on the Car Club Council of Central Virginia's calendar, National Capital Region Mustang Club's (NCRMC) September events calendar, and has been submitted to Hemmings Automotive Magazine for publication in their events section of the magazine.

The MCA's Grand National show in Columbus, Ohio is sold out as was the Gateway Southern Stampede in Grovetown, GA. in May. The Polaris Hilton and Comfort Inn North/Polaris are both sold out. There will be no car corral as all spaces are taken for the 500 Mustangs and show vendors. The host club, Mustang Club of Ohio, has a waiting list for show cancellations. To be added to that list, email your request to their Show Director, Al Hammond at ahammond1771@excite.com

As a member of MCA the Mustang Times magazine is included with your membership. The magazine contains important information on judging issues, articles & pictures on various National shows such as next years MCA's 40th Birthday celebration at Indianapolis Motor Speedway September 1st to 4th 2016. That will be a show not to miss and will probably be another sold out show; the June issue has a few details are on page 14. Also check the same page on my long time friend and journalist, Jim Smart (originally from Maryland and a member of my old club (NCRMC), received the Lee Iacocca award. If you want to join MCA, please see me during the break:

There is a new Facebook Mustang Club devoted to just 6 cylinder Mustangs of all years. This club has no dues and the newsletter is online. The website is mustang6association or just M6A.

Check our newsletter, club and Facebook websites for upcoming parades, shows and cruise-ins in the Richmond metro area.

FORD RETURNING TO LE
MANS IN 2016 WITH
ALL-NEW FORD GT,
MARKING 50TH
ANNIVERSARY OF 1966
VICTORY

JUN 12, 2015

LE MANS, FRANCE

- Ford returns to Le Mans in 2016 with the all-new Ford GT supercar to compete in LM GTE Pro class, commemorating the 50th anniversary of Ford's 1966 overall victory
- All-new Ford factory program to compete in both the FIA World Endurance Championship and TUDOR United SportsCar Championship with a two-team, four-car effort – operated by Chip Ganassi Racing with Felix Sabates
- Ford GT is company's showcase for aerodynamics and lightweight carbon fiber construction, along with new twin-turbocharged Ford EcoBoost® V6 – most powerful EcoBoost production engine ever

Ford announced today it is returning to one of the most prestigious automobile races in the world with its new Ford GT race car, based on the all-new ultra-high-performance supercar that goes on sale next year.

The Ford GT race car will compete in the 24 Hours of Le Mans – referred to by many as the Grand Prix of Endurance and Efficiency – starting next year. Revealed today at the famous circuit in Le Mans, France, Ford GT will compete in the Le Mans GT Endurance class for professional teams and drivers (LM GTE Pro).

The new race car – a further proof point of Ford innovation – is based on the all-new Ford GT supercar unveiled in January. Both the production car and race car will arrive in 2016 to mark the 50th anniversary of Ford GT race cars placing 1-2-3 at the 1966 24 Hours of Le Mans. Ford went on to repeat its victory at Le Mans in 1967, 1968 and 1969.

"When the GT40 competed at Le Mans in the 1960s, Henry Ford II sought to prove Ford could beat endurance racing's most legendary manufacturers," said Bill Ford, executive chairman, Ford Motor Company. "We are still extremely proud of having won this iconic race four times in a row, and that same spirit that drove the innovation behind the first Ford GT still drives us today."

The new Ford GT race car will run the full 2016 schedules of the FIA World Endurance Championship and TUDOR United SportsCar Championship, making its competition debut in January 2016 in the Rolex 24 At Daytona, Florida. The two Ford teams will be operated by Chip Ganassi Racing with Felix Sabates (CGRFS). Both series teams intend to compete with a four-car effort at Le Mans. Drivers will be announced later.

The all-new Ford GT serves as the pinnacle product of the new Ford Performance group, a division dedicated to providing innovation through performance.

Set to deliver more than 12 new performance vehicles by 2020, Ford Performance will leverage its racing efforts and expertise to speed innovations on dedicated performance models and performance parts in order to more quickly iterate the latest technologies that can ultimately be applied to the full Ford vehicle lineup.

The performance segment is a growing business for Ford, as the company recognizes its customers' desire for vehicles that offer excellent fuel economy, leading technology and a great driving experience. The Ford Performance lineup includes Ford GT, Focus RS, F-150 Raptor, Shelby GT350 and Shelby GT350R, Focus ST and Fiesta ST.

"Ford remains focused on three priorities globally – accelerating our One Ford plan, delivering product excellence with passion and driving innovation in every part of our business," said Mark Fields, Ford Motor Company president and CEO. "All three came together to create the new Ford GT. We also know from our rich history in motorsports that world-class competition is a great incubator for even further product innovation."

The Ford GT race car features a number of innovations Ford believes will not only make it competitive in LM GTE Pro, but ultimately positioned to provide benefits to each vehicle in the Ford lineup. These include state-of-the-art aerodynamics to deliver outstanding levels of downforce for improved stability with minimal drag, advanced lightweight composites featuring carbon fiber for an exceptionally rigid but light chassis, and the power and efficiency of EcoBoost technology.

"As we developed the Ford GT, from the outset, we wanted to ensure we had a car that has what it takes to return Ford to the world of GT racing," said Raj Nair, Ford Motor Company group vice president, Global Product Development and chief technical officer. "We believe the Ford GT's advances in aerodynamics, lightweighting and EcoBoost power will make for a compelling race car that can once again compete on a global stage."

Joining Ford in this project are Multimatic Motorsports, Roush Yates Engines, Castrol, Michelin, Forza Motorsport, Sparco, Brembo and CGRFS. The race car has undergone extensive design and testing within Ford and Multimatic, with CGRFS providing input into the development. Roush Yates is supporting development of the 3.5-liter EcoBoost V6 – the most powerful EcoBoost production engine ever.

The 3.5-liter EcoBoost V6 engine debuted in the TUDOR United SportsCar Championship in 2014. Since then, Ford, with CGRFS, has captured significant overall wins at the 12 Hours of Sebring and Rolex 24 At Daytona. Besides great success in sports cars, Ganassi race teams achieved major victories in the Daytona 500, Brickyard 400 and Indianapolis 500.

"We've won races and championships, but we've never run Le Mans," said team owner Chip Ganassi. "When presented the opportunity to compete with the all-new Ford GT on the world's biggest sports car stage, and on the 50th anniversary of one of the most storied victories in racing history, how could any race team not want to be part of that? Will it be a challenge? Absolutely, but we couldn't be with a better partner than Ford."

News From The Blue Oval

FORD PERFORMANCE SHELBY GT350R-C TO MAKE IMSA COMPETITION DEBUT AT WATKINS GLEN

JUN 24, 2015
DEARBORN, MICH.

- All-new Shelby® GT350R-C embodies Ford innovation through performance as race car makes its competition debut this weekend at Watkins Glen
- Shelby GT350R-C to compete in the remainder of the 2015 IMSA Continental Tire SportsCar

Challenge with Multimatic Motorsports

- Competition version of Shelby GT350R features all-new 5.2-liter flat-plane crankshaft V8 created to extend on-track performance
- There's no mistaking the wicked sound or aggressive looks of the all-new Shelby® GT350R-C that Ford announced today would see its first official track time at Watkins Glen this weekend.

Ford Shelby GT350R-C, the competition version of the reincarnated icon, will compete in the IMSA Continental Tire SportsCar Challenge, a showdown of the most popular – and accessible – performance cars from around the world.

The GT350R production car was unveiled in January, and is one of more than 12 new vehicles Ford Performance will bring to market through 2020. Since its introduction, sports car enthusiasts have eagerly awaited the debut of a racing version.

"Like so many Mustangs before it, the Shelby GT350R is a car born to race," said Dave Pericak, director, Global Ford Performance. "We're taking it to the track as the GT350R-C and we're ready to see what it can do against the best competition in the world."

Both production and race car versions feature the first-ever production car V8 from Ford with a flat-plane crankshaft. This unique layout – typically reserved for the world's most exotic sports cars – helped create the most powerful naturally aspirated engine Ford has ever produced.

The race car features an adapted version of the advanced, fully independent suspension from GT350R – fitted with revised spring rates and antiroll bars, lower ride height, unique track-tuned alignment settings, revised bushings and cross-axis ball joints in the front.

News from the Car Club Council

Longtime Ford partner Multimatic Motorsports, which will manage the race team, returned to the blue oval in the series' Grand Sport division in 2014, piloting the Mustang Boss 302R with some of the most popular and talented drivers on its roster. The squad will field drivers Billy Johnson, Scott Maxwell, Austin Cindric and Jade Buford for the GT350R-C debut at Watkins Glen.

"Ford is committed to the Continental Tire SportsCar Challenge and we're very happy to be campaigning its product here," said Larry Holt, team principal, Multimatic Motorsports. "We like the endurance format, and the racing is always intense. Strategy plays a big role; the cars must be fast and reliable, and there are always at least 10 contenders running door-to-door for two and a half hours. It is the perfect home for the GT350R-C."

"American muscle cars have a storied history in the Continental Tire SportsCar Challenge, and we eagerly anticipate the start of a new chapter with introduction of the Shelby GT350R-C," said Scott Atherton, president of IMSA. "Mustang has earned icon status through its racing heritage going back to the competition Mustangs of the 1960s, and this new race car will undoubtedly add to the legend."

Article by Ford Motor Company

The Low Volume Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Act of 2015 has been introduced in the House of Representatives sponsored by co-sponsored by Reps. Mark Mullin (R-Okla.) and Gene Green (D-Texas). H.R. 2675 is supported by SEMA. If this bill becomes law then small companies would be able to produce and sell ready-to-drive replicas of classic cars without subjecting them to the prohibitively expensive safety and emissions tests the major automakers' vehicles must undergo. In addition registered companies would be allowed to produce and sell up to 500 finished cars in the U.S. each year that would carry a federally issued Vehicle Identification Number. The cars will have to be exact visual replicas of vehicles that are at least 25 years old.

Today if you want a replica you would need to build it yourself or go to a state licensed vehicle manufacturer. This law would allow building of replicas without the government red tape of safety and emissions standards. Traditional automakers have opposed such legislation in the past. While most hobbyists look at this as good news the bad news side is that licensed vehicle manufacturers – who have already suffered in the current economy – may find themselves with no customers for custom built kit cars.

The State of Texas refused to allow the Confederate flag on Sons of Confederate veterans' license plates. Some states, including Virginia, have allowed the Confederate battle flag on plates. The case went to court and finally to the US Supreme Court where the decision to not allow the flag on Texas plates was upheld. The reasoning was interesting. Justice Stephen Breyer, said the state's action did not touch upon free speech rights because messages on state-issued plates are government speech, not private speech. Breyer said that license plates are "essentially, government IDs." Messages conveyed on plates can be interpreted as government-endorsed because "each specialty license plate design is formally approved by and stamped with the imprimatur of Texas."

I think everyone realized that when the state decided to go with whatever license plate would sell that it was opening a can of worms. I can recall writing what do we do when vehicles have plates both for and against abortion. The government should have never gotten involved with such special plates; we have bumper stickers for that purpose. But the state wants more and more money to spend and giving people optional plates at additional cost won – yes, money usually wins.

Oil supply is exceeding demand causing a glut of oil and I am wondering why prices at the pump are not dropping. If sanctions are removed from Iran then oil production and the glut would increase. Look for a drop in gasoline prices after the summer travel season.

Is E15 gasoline coming to a pump near you? While automakers do not agree with the EPA's opinion that E15 is okay for vehicles back to 2001, some automakers are now saying it is okay to use with newer vehicles. GM says it is safe to use with GM vehicles built in 2012 to the current models. Ford vehicles 2013 and newer are okay to use E15. Toyota has approved E15 only for 2015 models. Chrysler, Volvo, Subaru, Nissan and Mazda have not approved E15 for use in their vehicles. Currently there are 78 E15 stations in 12 states. There are no stations on the east coast offering E15.

As the summer heats up so does the debate over climate change.

Now the Pope has gone on record with a manifesto. You can read the document at http://w2.vatican.va/content/francesco/en/encyclicals/documents/papa-francesco_20150524_enciclica-laudato-si.html

What you may not know and what the news media left out was that EPA Administrator Gina McCarthy met with Vatican officials about climate change back in January. She said her aim was to show how aligned President Obama and the Pope were on climate change. "I think the most important thing that we can do, working with the pope, is to try to remind ourselves that this is really about protecting natural resources that human beings rely on, and that those folks that are most vulnerable — that the church has always been focused on, those in poverty and low income — are the first that are going to be hit and impacted by a changing climate. It's certainly not my place to dictate to the pope what he should be doing in an encyclical" stated the EPA head. All I can add to that last sentence is "sure".

Just a couple of weeks ago President Obama revealed his new set of rules aimed at reducing greenhouse gases in an effort to combat climate change. The new rules will affect big trucks, airplane, oil and natural-gas operations, and power plant emissions. Congress is ready to block these changes. A bipartisan bill has been introduced which gives individual states the power to opt out of the Environmental Protection Agency's carbon emission rules for existing power plants. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell sent letters to all 50 governors urging them to opt out of the emission rules. Congress is also trying to take money from the EPA to prevent the enforcement of new rules.

We are still waiting on the final report from the EPA on hydraulic fracturing and later this year the EPA will announce new stricter ozone standards.
